For paving Michigan avenue from the railroad to Spruce street—(3 blocks) Yes 200. No 143.

For changing from Central Standard time from June 3rd to Sept. 2nd inclusive—Yes, 171. No, 180.

The total number of votes cast was 348, which was a very good showing for such a day as Monday when a sun and snow or less rain caused the snow banks to dissolve at a high rate of speed and the streets were very wet. The people were interested largely in the proposition of paving Main street. There were some very decided opinions on each side of the question and it wasn't easy to dope out just how the people intended to vote.

However, the result of the paving proposal of course pleased the Avalanche. It convinces that the majority of the residents of Grayling are ready and willing to pay the cost for paving the city, it is bound to carry on for many years to come.

We don't believe it pays to lay down a road just as long as the people stand and pull together. While we cannot hope for complete unity of effort we believe that the right kind of concerted effort on the part of the majority of the residents of Grayling is going to help keep Grayling in the front ranks of prosperity.

Certainly we hope for added industries, but it would be folly to permit any of those already established here to leave if within our power to prevent. And there is one branch of business that may always be dependent upon a more or less degree—the tourist business. How large is going to be our share of that greatly depends upon what we have to offer and then the kind of reception and treatment tourists receive while here. We're going to dress up our reception room Main street at least. That will help a lot. We are going to make our guests comfortable and help them to enjoy themselves in our community. The friendly smile and attitude and courteous treatment will do a lot to keep them coming.

School Notes

Editors—Isbrand Harder, Ellen Speck, Corinne Sheldon.

The American literature class are all busy getting ready for their book report.

The primary teacher had two visitors last week from the high school room and why? Ask Ellis and Lawrence.

Miss Adams—"Annabel, what did you learn about the salivary glands?" Annabel—"I couldn't find out a thing, Miss Adams. They're so very secretive."

Paul—"Why did you put your girl's picture in your work?"

Alva—"Because I think she will love me in time."

Elmer—"I had an awful fright last night."

Stanley S.—"Yes, I saw you with her."

Miss Clark—"Who was the first sportsman?"

Ellen S.—Adam, he started the race as soon as he was able.

Oliver Wendall Holmes says: "A misprint kills a sensitive author. An intentional change of his text murders him. No wonder so many poets die young."

The Senior class has begun working on their play.

Watch for further announcements in regard to the College Glee Club which is coming from Kalamazoo to entertain you on March 26.

Arthur M. wants to know how long girls should be courted. Same as short ones, we should say.

Miss Clark—"How many wars was the United States involved in during the nineteenth century?"

Pauline S.—Three.

Miss Clark—"Enumerate them."

Pauline—One, two, three.

Mr. Cushman (in civics)—The head of an Indian tribe is called a "Chief."

Now, can anybody tell me what the chief's daughter is called?

Pauline—"Miss Chief."

Miss Adams—"Can you tell me the name of any animal peculiar in Australia?"

Ruth—"The rhinoceros."

Miss Adams—"Wrong. That's not found in Australia."

Ruth—"Well, that's exactly why it would be peculiar."

ANSWERS E. M. T. AD OF FOUR YEARS AGO

(By E. M. T. Service)

The cumulative effects of the advertising which the East Michigan Tourist association is doing in calling attention to the recreational appeals of the section is large. An example of this came to the attention of E. M. T. Service last week, when the East Michigan Tourist association received an inquiry from a gentleman at Dayton Beach, Florida.

Accompanying his request for literature was a clipping from the April, 1924, issue of Field & Stream. This advertisement was precisely four years old.

The gentleman making the inquiry is a New York City manufacturer, spending the winter in Florida.

After eating an early breakfast, we packed a small suitcase with sandwiches and other good things, filled a bottle with hot coffee, looked over our map, packed our coats and hats, and started on our trip.

almost always. We tried to get some pictures there.

We also stopped at Tijou pass a few minutes to exercise. Here a small plateau had been blasted from the mountain side. On this side of the roadway, about fifty feet wide at this spot, on an "S" or horse-shoe curve, and maybe three hundred feet in length, was built a postoffice, cafe, two or three tourist cabins, rest rooms, and what at one time, was a saloon. All were in a row, they were facing the road and had no back doors, back of them the mountain wall was down to the road, and if you tried to go over the top, you would find a perpendicular wall that leaped out over the roadway at this place and must have been somewhere about five hundred feet high. On these roads each driver must keep on the right of the center white line or terrible accidents occur, as the roads are only wide enough for two cars at one time, and if you try to swing over top quickly, the roads, being round and curved, and the curves, the machine skids, driver loses control, and down you go or else smash into a solid rock wall. The speed force, we did not care if we could not see, soon the horizon was rising and the sun came from behind the snow-capped mountains on our left. We passed several flocks of wild geese, traveling the same way as we, namely south, so you see, we were moving right along about fifty feet per hour; the valley was getting narrower and the mountains were looming ahead.

Aunt Eva lives at Eagle Rock which is on Colorado Boulevard, the main road, or street, thru several cities, from Burbank to Los Angeles. For fifty miles, or perhaps more, you can't know where one city ends and another begins if they were not marked with electric signs, hanging over the street announcing the city limits.

A few miles from Bakersfield a huge sign read "Hank's Free Camp Ground." We drove in about eleven o'clock a. m. and prepared to eat our lunch. Soon after began to appear, black, calico, and malleo, old, young, and everybody very hungry as they attacked our lunch which was spread on the table. Some got knocked into the garbage can, and it kept us busy, between bites, defending our eats. There was a sign "Toll to Hank," but we did not bother. While lunching, we were entertained by the singing of many birds. A family was there in a tent on the grounds, and the kiddies were bare foot. After lunch, we walked around a little. On returning to the car, we did not need our heavy coats or robes which we have learned to roll and store away so as to be free and comfortable. Starting out again, we were soon passing fields of cotton that had not been picked and is now mildewed; many grapes were in the same condition. This was between Bakersfield and Los Angeles, reaching the Los Angeles, the road was splendid. We could see for miles, straight ahead, the black road-bed, white line in the center about six inches wide, light grey edges—eighteen inches wide, bordered with green grass. We were riding thru an alkali desert of pure white sand with a tuff of wavy grass, now and then; no other vegetation.

At about noon we entered a most continuous city. Pasadena appeared on either side. The where, in every available space was Coast Ranges on the right were not being built tiers of seats to accommodate as high as the Sierra Nevada on the left. The latter were covered with snow and ice which glistened in spots, were everywhere, show windows were like diamonds. By this time we had full of chairs, also windows in second shed all our wraps and hats and third stories. Thence thru to opened the windows. There was no dust, however, as the roads are asphalt. The heat is so intense, sometimes that it makes them soft. Looking ahead, the road seemed suddenly to tend into the mountains, but there were machines zigzagging up the mountainside, sometimes to our right, then to our left; always higher up, and looking like bugs. To look around, you do not realize you are going up, but the machine is laboring, thus, convincing you that it is up-hill work. We were now going up to Tijou pass, soon began to get our wraps out and on. As we got higher, the ears have a stuffed feeling; as you go down they clear with a snapping sound and you can hear plainly. The sounds seem so loud that it's confusing.

At Lobos the town was along a railroad in a canyon a thousand feet below us, and I do not believe it was more than a mile across the canyon at this place. We were on a cliff looking down. On this cliff the road workers had camped, and there was a huge "Shell" gasoline sign. I am always wanting to get out to look, and walk around, exasperating Lacey,

STATE SPORTSMEN MOVE ON SAGINAW

WORTHWHILE CONSERVATION PROGRAM PLANNED FOR IZAAK WALTON LEAGUERS

Saginaw, Mich., March 12.—One hundred and sixty delegates and one many more sportsmen and conservationists are expected here for the annual convention of the Michigan division of the Izaak Walton League of America.

The sessions will begin at 10 o'clock Friday morning, March 23, and continue through the next day.

"This convention," says Hiram A. Savage of Saginaw, president of the Michigan division, "will without question be the most important gathering in connection with conservation and protection of Michigan's outdoor resources ever held in the state."

A former secretary of war and now president of the Izaak Walton League of America, a university professor, the general manager of the national league, two members of the state conservation department and the author of the Indiana conservation program are among the men on the speaking program.

Broader Conservation Sought. They are Henry Baldwin, head of the University of Illinois, whose reputation is that of a national authority on aquatic life and stream pollution; Jacob M. Dickinson, Chicago, president of the Izaak Walton League of America and secretary of war in the Taft administration; Fred H. Duell, Chicago, general manager of the national organization; Homer Murphy of the Michigan conservation department, in charge of stream pollution activities; Philip S. Lovejoy of the state conservation department, in charge of game, game refuges and public shooting grounds; and Senator L. G. Bradford of South Bend, Ind., author of Indiana's new conservation code.

The convention delegates will consider from various angles and means to broaden and extend the scope of conservation activities, with but one object in view—the protection of our forests, lakes and streams and the wild life therein, but also for the pleasure and recreation of the present generation but for all time to come.

Nature has been liberal to the verge of extravagance in her endowment of opportunities for health and recreation in the territory lying inside the bowtie of Michigan.

Says President Savage of the Michigan division of the league, "The broad, open spaces of unspoiled land, thousands of shady nooks and crannies, islands, standing lakes and rippling rivers are fast making Michigan the mecca of millions drawn to this state by her unsurpassed natural beauties."

The business and professional men of Michigan are reaping every year a golden harvest of millions of dollars from these thousands who enter our boundaries to roam over what in the past was considered waste land.

"The Izaak Walton League stands as the champion and protector of outdoor resources. Its work has been of the greatest benefit to Michigan's results are everywhere. The convention will furnish ample evidence of the value of its program and the sincerity of its efforts to assure the continued blessing of a sound and thoroughly workable policy of conservation."

LYCEUM UNDERTAKEN AS A COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE

The Epworth League, which has sponsored the Lyceum course for the past two years, have asked that the community at large undertake this work with the result that Mr. Persons of the Redpath Lyceum Bureau called on the citizens of the town last week in an effort to secure at least fifty guarantors to make possible an excellent program of Lyceum numbers next winter. Within a very brief time fifty guarantors were obtained and the Lyceum Course assured.

Last year the League put on five numbers, numbers ranging in cost from $50 to $85. This year it has been decided to put on only four numbers, but to secure the better financial result, ranging in cost from $20 to $50.

Such an arrangement would be possible by bringing to our town of Private Post World War Letters and Dramatist who has received as much as $1,000 a night, the DeGiorgio Orchestra the finest musical family on the Redpath booking, Tess Sheehan and her Killarney Cullerina in a great Irish program and the Little Dickson Concert Co. of New York City.

A Scarlet Shaft Of Sunrise

These are days when our eyes eagerly scan the horizon to see signs of a new day and a new enduring social order. A few weeks ago Mr. Kellogg of the United States State Department surprised the world by his sweeping proposal for a multi-lateral treaty for the abolition of war. Let France misunderstand his proposal he states in part: "The abolition of the United States government of the United States should be suppressed in the common interest." Now we shall see whether European peace talk is sincere, whether the league of nations has a military character, and whether France was serious in her proposal to the United States for a bi-lateral treaty to eliminate war. The fact that cheers us is that our own United States is gravely engaged in the initial stages of negotiating a peace pact whose significance dwarfs any attempt ever made to rid the world of the institution of war. This is the shaft of sunrise that is prophetic of a new day.

PRIMARY CONCERT FINE SUCCESS

The concert given by the children of the primary department of the Michelson Sunday School at the church last Friday evening turned out to be a fine success. Many compliments have been offered on the entertainment and by some it was regarded as the best children's program put on in Grayling in some time. However there were so many things doing on Friday evening that many were unable to attend the concert and for that reason it will be repeated again on Friday evening.

The following who took principal parts in the concert did very nicely last Friday night and are sure to please again this week:

Patricia McKenna, Alberta Knibbs, Bobby Welsh (5 years old), Donald Wood, Madeline Greenwood (3 years old), Helen Elaine McLeod, Dorothy Wakley, Margaret Smith, Perry Greenwood, Ruth Burrows, Eva Wheeler, Gloria McNeven, John Hanson, Beatrice and Virginia Peterson, Charles Bradley, Billy Joseph, Floyd Wylie, Fred Wood and Percy Griffin.

Georgiana Land, 8 years old, nicely rendered "Onward Christian Soldiers" on her violin. Leading the chorus in that song. Between scenes 1 and 2, Helen Elaine McLeod, 7 years old and Vivian Dawson and Dorothy Wakley, 8 years old played piano solos in a pleasing manner.

Donald Gothro was platform manager and Billy Joseph in Tuxedo dress acted the part of orchestra director. The primary orchestra made a big hit, playing the opening selection and also playing between scene 1 and 2. The instruments included tambores, saxophone, two violins, flute, xylophone, drum and others.

In all the entertainment was very clever and Mrs. Peter McNeven, who is superintendent of the primary department and her helpers are to be highly commended for their efforts in presenting the concert.

Nakant, Johannes Rasmusson and Frank X. Tetu.
